Ohio Republicans.

On the 7th inst. the Ohio Republican State Central Committee held a meeting at Columbus. Of the 21 members, 18 were present; but it was an "open" meeting and there was a goodly attendance of representative Republicans from all over the state. Chairman Parmenter presided. There was a splendid spirit of optimism, all reports—from both members of the Committee and from individual visitors—being to the effect that the get-together movement among the rank and file is strong. By invitation, Senator Burton addressed the meeting.

The State Central Committee unanimously endorsed the action of the National Committee as to the reduction of southern representation at conventions.

A resolution of respect to the memory of Hon. Fred Bader, member for the First District, who died recently, was passed, and John V. Campbell of Cincinnati was elected in Mr. Bader's place.

It was decided to have a statewide dinner on Thursday, February 26, at Columbus, the price for which should not be more than $2. The invitation to attend the dinner is of the broadest character—to all who in the past have aligned themselves with the party, without reference to recent differences. Senator Borah, of Idaho, has been invited to be the principal speaker.

MONEY THAT WILL TALK.

Speaking Banknotes as a Protection Against Counterfeits.

The question of protection against counterfeit banknotes is one which is being discussed in England just at present. A member of the Royal Society recently showed the results of a discovery which he made, and by this means he is able to imitate copper or steel engraved banknotes so perfectly that the president of a large bank was unable to pick the single genuine banknote out of a lot of ten, which included nine of the kind reproduced by the author. This was intended to show the error of the prevailing opinion that banknotes cannot be imitated.

At the same time that this somewhat disconcerting news comes out a new remedy against counterfeit notes is proposed, this being the "speaking" banknote, and should a system of the kind be adopted the note will not only concern the eye, but will assert its genuineness in a loud and intelligible voice should it be placed in a phonograph.

In fact, the note carries a given phrase, which is inscribed on the edge just as on a phonograph cylinder, using a specially prepared paper for this purpose. Any kind of phrase can naturally be used, and its purpose is of little importance, as it is designed simply to have a check upon the quality of the banknote by the use of the voice.

All that is needed is to put the note into a properly designed phonograph, when it will speak for itself, according to the present idea, while a counterfeit remains silent. The method is certainly an original one, but it would not seem a very hard matter to counterfeit the phonograph record as well as the note itself.—Scientific American.

The Dancing Crowd in New York.

That New York is dance mad was proved New Year's Eve when at nearly all the restaurants people of all ages danced out the old, and in the incoming year. The new dances are so pretty and graceful when properly danced by the right kind of people that one wonders at the fuss they have occasioned until a glimpse is had of the same dances done by the other sort in another way. How it will all end time only will tell but just now the middle aged and older dancers outdo their children and grandchildren in enthusiasm.

Short Dresses the Rule.

No doubt this craze is responsible for the fact that almost everyone is wearing either short dresses, or little whisks of trains, that are made to catch up at one side into the draperies, quite out of the way when dancing is indulged. This fashion like many others not designed for her benefit, is turned to account by the woman whose few gowns must do service for many occasions. A black satin frock that is short and practical enough to be worn on foot in the street, under a smart warm coat when that garment is put off, emerges, with a dainty transparent bodice, and fishtail train, dropped at a touch from its concealed fastening. Black taffeta is exceedingly smart just now for afternoon wear, and all the colored taffetas including changeables follow a close second. White and the paler tints are relegated to gaslight wear as a rule, though a long all enveloping wrap makes even these go at the popular afternoon tea dances.

Transformation Gowns.

"Transformation gowns" is an apt name for dresses that, worn with a gamp are suited for afternoon wear, and without this separate appendage, are correct for evening occasions. A number of excellent models for such frocks are to be had and most of them are easy to construct.

Dresses and suits of string color, beige and similar tints are lately notable at the fashionable restaurants, also pastel pinks, and ivory whites. Such delicate colors need a touch of fine dark fur to save them from insipidity. This is often supplied in the collar, cuff and muff of fitch, ermine, sable or civet, and protects the suit and its wearer.

Fashionable Wraps.

Supple wraps of fur in belted or coat form are the choice of the woman who understands the art of good dressing. These, if of seal, broadtail or ermine are quite out of reach of the woman who spends moderately for her dress, but there are beautiful coats to be had in reliable pelts, made up in latest styles at very moderate figures now that January prices prevail.

At C. C. Shayne & Co.'s, where I usually go to get the latest news of fur fashions, I saw beautiful coats of sable squirrel, and of soft gray moleskin that anyone would be proud to wear, marked at figures that make their possession easily possible. Many of the coats of dyed muskrat which look exactly like seal and wear as well, were so smartly made and beautifully lined that they were quite as attractive as the more costly furs. Sets of scarf and muff in this same muskrat are in excellent style, suited to maid or matron and are not in the prohibitively expensive class.

Vests and Girdles

Small lengths of brocade that can be picked up at the prevailing January sales, make effective vests to freshen and smarten winter suits. Some of the prettiest now have collars attached that turn over the jacket ending just in front of the shoulder line, after the fashion familiar in fur trimmings.

Wide girdles of brocade, Roman stripe or plaided silks are similarly useful to transform a plain frock.

A PYTHON IN SPLINTS.

Interesting Reptile Surgery at the London Zoo.

A second operation has just been performed on the great python at the zoological gardens, who fractured his jaw while swallowing a goat a few weeks ago.

After the jaw and head had been enveloped in a rigid casing for a couple of weeks he began to shed his skin. It was impossible for the patient to complete the shedding while the head was bound up, and the bandage was therefore removed. The bones of the jaw, it was found, had partly reunited.

With his head free again the python was obviously in the best of spirits and celebrated the occasion by swallowing a duck. The skin of the head was then shed, including the transparent outer lenses of the eye. Afterward it was decided to replace the plaster of paris.

Awaiting a moment when the giant reptile was coiled in his tank, six heavy keepers crawled into his cage, each carrying a stout board. These were quickly slid over the top of the tank while the operators sought for the injured head through an opening between two of the boards. Once the neck was seized the six heavy keepers sprang on the boards and were ordered to sit tight, thus forming a living roof. As the powerful coils heaved inside the tank the heavy keepers were lifted up bodily, but their combined weight was too much for the heavy python, and the splint and bandages were rapidly replaced.

It will be some weeks before the bandages are removed, and meantime the python will not be able to eat or see.—London Mail.
